

Physicians From Your Wyoming Residency Programs Practice All Across The State!

The Casper and Cheyenne residency programs have been serving Wyoming communities since 1976 and 1980, respectively, and deliver comprehensive health care services to more than 12,000 people every year. The Cheyenne program is a residency model of 6-6-6: six first-year resident physicians, six second-year resident physicians and six third-year resident physicians. The Casper program is an 8-8-8 model. Thirty-five percent of our program graduates remain in Wyoming to practice family medicine throughout the state. Currently 100 family practice physicians from these programs practice in the state of Wyoming.

Jonathon Medina, M.D.

After graduating from the residency program in Cheyenne, I started working in Colorado. I was fortunate to meet some of my colleagues that were trained elsewhere. I realized just how great the program in Cheyenne is (when we compared our training). I decided to return to Wyoming and could not be happier.

Travis Bomengen, M.D.

I attended Family Practice Internship and Residency training at the UW Family Practice Casper site in the late 90s, and have been practicing rural Family Practice medicine in the state since. A short stint in Sundance, and then Thermopolis since then. Without a doubt I would not be in Wyoming without the Residency program.
